OLIVER OSBORNE SAVE YOUR BREATH EP

April will see the release of Oliver Osborne's Save Your Breath EP on Singapore based imprint Ecclesia Records, backed with remixes from Stephen Day, Ashley Casselle & Usul.

Oliver Osborne laid the foundations for his career in London at nightclubs such as fabric, 93 ft East, Corsica Studios and The Big Chill Bar. DJing alongside partner J.P.Saves as thisandthat, before relocating to Singapore, the homeland of Ecclesia Records. This is the first time we have featured the label in Tilllate Magazine.

Opening the single is the original mix of title track Save Your Breath, a dropped tempo tripped-out number driven by hypnotizing acidic bass licks, sparse yet punchy percussion and swirling chords. While Osborne's heartfelt vocal lines about dealing with tough truths adds a further charm to the composition. British-born now Singapore-based producer Stephen Day drops a rework of Save Your Breath to follow, the fledgling DJ delivers a more upfront interpretation with an insistent movement on the rhythmic aspects of the mix, while tension building atmospheric and the heady bass of the original rounds of the remix as a heavy hitting dance floor workout.

On the latter half of the release we have another original from Osborne, namely Don't Fear What They Say, again the record is instilled with emotion through a warm chord progression and inspirational vocals about believing in what you're doing. To close the release we see Murge Recordings' Ashley Casselle team up with Italy's Disco Volante resident, Usul, to rework Don't Fear What They Say. The duo turn in a smooth ethereal rendering fuelled by warm pads, organic percussion and an addictive bass hook, with Casselle & Usul rounding off the package nicely with an instrumental dub version.

Oliver Osborne's Save Your Breath EP is out on Ecclesia Records 18 April.
